If a financial statement is not prepared in accordance with the going concern assumption, the accounting principle applied shall be set out in the statement;
- 3) understandability – the information disclosed in financial statements shall be concise and unambiguous to users of the statement who have sufficient financial knowledge to understand the statement;

Immaterial items may be accounted for and recorded in the financial statements using a simplified method;
- 5) consistency and comparability – the same accounting policies, presentation formats and financial statement formats are used on an on-going basis in preparation of financial statements;

Costs incurred during an accounting period other than the period in which they benefit the accounting entity shall be recorded as expenses during the period in which they benefit the entity;
- 7) objectivity – information presented in financial statements shall be objective and reliable;
- 8) conservatism – financial statements shall be prepared on a prudent and cautious basis in order to avoid overestimation of assets or revenue or underestimation of liabilities or expenses. At the same time, it is prohibited intentionally to understate assets or revenue, overstate liabilities or expenses, or create reserves hidden from the users of the statements;
- 9) disclosure – financial statements shall disclose all the information necessary to present a true and fair view of the financial position, economic performance and cash flows of the accounting entity;
- 10) substance over form – business transactions are recorded in accounts and financial statements based on their substance even if this does not correspond to their legal form.
