Upon reviewing and determination of the need therefor the quality with which the persons provided in the rules perform their functions shall also be assessed.

[RT I 2005, 13, 64 - entry into force 01.04.2005]

§ 188. Market manipulation

(1) For the purposes of this Act, market manipulation means:
1) transactions or orders to trade which give, or are likely to give, false or misleading signals as to the supply of, demand for or price of financial instruments, unless the person who entered into the transactions or issued the orders to trade establishes that his or her reasons for so doing are legitimate and that these transactions or orders to trade conform to accepted market practices on the market concerned;
2) transactions or orders to trade which secure, by a person, or persons acting in collaboration, the price of one or several financial instruments at an abnormal or artificial level, unless the person who entered into the transactions or issued the orders to trade establishes that his or her reasons for so doing are legitimate and that these transactions or orders to trade conform to accepted market practices on the market concerned;
3) transactions or orders to trade which employ fictitious devices or any other form of deception or contrivance;
4) dissemination of information in media channels, including Internet, or in any other way which gives, or is likely to give, false or misleading signals as to financial instruments, where the person who made the dissemination knew, or ought to have known, that the information was false or misleading;
5) other transactions or acts which constitute market manipulation and which are similar to the transactions or acts provided for in clauses 1)-4) of this subsection.

(1) Market manipulation, in particular, includes the following:
1) ensuring a dominant position by a person or persons acting in concert as regards the demand or supply of a financial instrument if in the course thereof purchase or selling prices are determined directly or indirectly or other unfair trade terms are created;
2) acquisition or transfer of financial instruments upon closing the market which misleads investors acting on the basis of closing price;
3) dissemination of information in media channels, including opinions or rumours, regarding a financial instrument or the issuer thereof if a contract of purchase or sale of the financial instrument or a derivative instrument connected with the financial instrument has been previously entered into, which affects the price of the financial instrument and benefits from its effect on the price of the financial instrument in case the conflict of interests has not been duly and efficiently disclosed at the same time.

(1) In the assessment of the market manipulation specified in clauses (1) 1) and 2) of this section the following signals are inter alia taken into consideration, keeping in mind that such signal per se shall not necessarily denote market manipulation:
1) orders to trade or transactions constitute a substantial part of the daily turnover of the transactions concluded with the corresponding financial instrument or the transactions on the corresponding market, primarily in case such activity causes significant change in the price of the financial instrument;
2) orders to trade or transactions of persons who hold substantial purchase or sale position in respect of a financial instrument cause significant changes in the price of the financial instrument admitted for trading on the market or a derivative instrument connected therewith or the underlying asset thereof;
3) the beneficial owner of a financial instrument admitted for trading on the market does not change as a result of the concluded transactions;
4) orders to trade or transactions comprise change of positions to contrary within a short period of time and constitute a substantial part of the daily turnover of the transactions concluded with the corresponding financial instrument or scope on the corresponding market, especially in case such activity causes significant change in the price of the financial instrument;
5) orders to trade or transactions are concentrated in a short period of time during the trading period and cause the price change which subsequently changes to the contrary;
6) orders to trade change the best purchase or selling price offered in respect of a financial instrument admitted for trading on the regulated market or (including) in more general terms the content of the order book available to the market participants, and these are cancelled before the execution;
7) orders to trade are granted or transactions are concluded simultaneously or almost simultaneously with the calculation of reference prices, settlement prices and values, and these orders to trade or transactions cause the price changes of a financial instrument by affecting such reference prices, settlement prices and values.
In the assessment of the market manipulation specified in clause (1) 3) of this section the following signals are inter alia taken into consideration, keeping in mind that such signal per se shall not necessarily denote market manipulation:

1) before or after the persons' orders to trade or transactions, the same persons or persons connected with them disseminate incorrect, unclear, incomplete or misleading information;
2) persons who granted orders to trade or concluded transactions or persons connected with them have previously or subsequently prepared or disseminated investment analyses or investment recommendations, which contain errors, are biased or evidently influenced by significant interests.

Deception or contrivance is an act or omission which misleads or may mislead a reasonable person investing in financial instruments regarding the actual economic circumstances, especially the demand and supply of a financial instrument, and maintains the price of the financial instrument or exerts pressure on the rise or decline of the price.

The examples of market manipulation specified in subsection (1) of this section shall not restrict the application of subsection (1) of this section, and the signals specified in subsections (1) 2) and (1) 3) of this section also shall not restrict the application of subsections (1) and (1) 1) of this section.

Market manipulation is prohibited. The Minister of Finance may, by a regulation, establish an illustrative list of patterns of activity which constitute market manipulation and circumstances taken into account upon ascertaining of market manipulation.

§ 188. Accepted market practices

(1) For the purposes of this Act, accepted market practices are practices that are reasonably expected in one or more financial markets and are accepted by the Supervision Authority pursuant to the provisions of this section.

(2) In order to ensure honest operation and sufficient innovation and dynamicity in securities markets, the Supervision Authority shall, each time, assess practices on the basis of the following principles:

1) new or emerging market practices are not assumed to be unacceptable by the Supervision Authority simply because they have not been previously accepted by it;
2) honest, legal and efficient operation in the interests of clients without the Supervision Authority interfering with the normal operation of the market shall be ensured to persons providing investment services as a permanent activity.

(3) In addition to the provisions of subsection (2) of this section, the Supervision Authority shall take the following circumstances into account upon assessment of operation:

1) the level of transparency of the relevant market practice to the whole market of the financial instrument;
2) the degree to which the relevant practice takes into account the trading mechanism of the relevant market of the financial instrument;
3) the degree to which the relevant practice enables market participants to react properly and in a timely manner to the new market situation created by that practice;
4) the need to safeguard the operation of market forces and the proper interplay of the forces of supply and demand;
5) the risk inherent in the relevant practice for the honest and lawful operation of markets in the relevant financial instrument within the whole European Economic Area;
6) the outcome of any investigation of the relevant market practice by any foreign securities market supervisory agency;
7) the structural characteristics of the relevant market of financial instruments, the types of financial instruments traded and the type of market participants;
8) the degree to which the relevant market practice has an impact on the liquidity and efficiency of the market of the financial instrument.

(4) Upon assessment of that specified in clause (3) 4) of this section, the Supervision Authority shall analyse the impact of the relevant market practice against the main market parameters.

(5) The Supervision Authority has the right to determine accepted market practices in one or more financial markets. Upon determination of accepted market practices, the Supervision Authority shall cooperate with persons providing investment services as a permanent activity, operators, issuers and investors or organisations representing them, and with securities market supervisory agencies of other states. The Supervision Authority shall publish the definition of accepted market practices and its reasoned opinions regarding the conformity of operations to accepted market practices on its website.
§ 188. Specifications for assessment of operations

In respect of journalists when they act in their professional capacity the dissemination of information provided for in clause 188(1) 4) of this Act is to be assessed, taking into account the rules governing their profession, unless those persons derive, directly or indirectly, an advantage or profits from the dissemination of the information in question.

shall be appointed for up to two years in accordance with the rules and regulations of the arbitral tribunal.

(2) A decision to secure an action determined on the basis of subsection (1) of this section shall be enforced pursuant to a ruling of a county court. The county court shall make the ruling on the basis of a petition of a party in proceedings on petition and allow enforcement of the decision on securing the action only if the same measure for securing the action has not been requested from the court already. The county court may reword the ruling on securing the action if this is necessary in order to apply a measure for securing the action.

(3) A county court may annul or amend a ruling on the securing of an action on the basis of an application.

(4) If it becomes evident that securing an action in arbitral proceedings was not justified, a party which applied for securing the action shall compensate the opposing party for the damage caused to the party due to securing the action or a security provided in order to prevent application of a measure for securing the action.

§ 208. Co-operation with county courts

[RT I, 26.04.2013, 2 - entry into force 06.05.2013]

(2) The operator of a system participating in the linked system shall determine in its own system rules the moment of entry of transfer order into the system and the moment of irretrievability from the system to ensure coordination with the rules of other interoperable systems.

In order to manage operating and management risks, a system operator shall apply sufficient internal control measures.

The provisions of subsection 79 (5) and § 80 of this Act pertaining to managers of an investment firm apply with respect to the members of the supervisory board and management board of a system operator.
